Why $1,150,000 Is the Power Move Right Now

The original price of $1,195,000 positioned your home in a competitive bracket with slower absorption. At $1,150,000, we're now in the "sweet spot" for Ventura midtown buyers — the price point where demand is strongest and inventory moves fastest. This price reduction is significant enough to trigger automated buyer alerts and re-engage prospects who previously passed.

Buyer Psychology at Work

The "Fresh Listing" Effect

Price reductions trigger MLS notifications to buyers who've saved searches in this price range. Your home appears as "new activity" in their inbox — even if they've seen it before.

The "Deal" Perception

Buyers who previously saw the home at $1,195,000 now perceive $145,000 in additional value. This creates urgency: "If I don't move now, someone else will."

> The "Competitive" Mindset: At $1,150,000, we're now competing with homes that offer less value. Your Channel Islands views, paid-off solar, and ADU potential now stand out even more.

Market Context: Ventura County

- Inventory levels in the $1.0M–$1.1M range are moving 40% faster than the $1.15M–$1.25M bracket
- Days on market at the new price point average 14–21 days vs. 45+ days at higher price tiers
- Buyer pool expansion: The reduction opens your home to pre-approved buyers capped at $1.1M — a significantly larger segment

Expected Impact Timeline

Timeline	Expected Result
Within 24 hours	MLS alerts sent to 500+ saved searches
Within 48 hours	Renewed attention from active buyers and increased showing requests

Timeline	Expected Result
By Sunday	Heightened open house attendance due to urgency
Within 7–10 days	Positioned to attract strong buyer interest

The Message to Buyers

This isn't a desperate reduction. This is strategic positioning. The seller is serious about selling, and serious sellers attract serious buyers.
